General Description of the Purkeville Hydropathic Institute.

The main building is three stories high, standing back from the strest about one hundred feet, with a semicircular grass plot in front, and contains thirty to forty rooms. The grounds around the house are tastefully laid out with walks and planted with trees, shrubs, &c. On the left of the entrance to these grounds is a cottage containing four rooms, used by male patients as a bathing house, with every convenience for "packing," bathing, &c.; on the right of the entrance, about two hundred feet distant, stands a similar cottage, used by the ladies for similar purposes.

In the rear of the Institute, at the distance of one hundred feet, are three other cottages, some eighty feet apart. One of these is the laundry, with a hydrant at the door; the other two are occupied by the servants.

The hydrant water is introduced into these cottages as well as into the main building, and all the waste water carried off by drains under ground.

THE WATER WORKS

Consist of a circular stone Building, standing on the brow of a hill, surmounted by a large codar reservoir containing five hundred barrels, brought from a never-failing spring of a hill, surmounted by a large codar reservoir containing five hundred barrels, brought from a newer-failing spring of pure cold water in the side of the hill, by "a hydraulic ram," a self-acting machine of cast iron, that is kept constantly going, night and day, by the descent of the water from the spring. The surplus water is carried from the reservoir to a fountain in the water-works yard, surrounded by weeping willows. In the first story of the water-works is a circular room, containing the douche bath, which is a stream failing from a beight, of about thirty feet, and can be varied in size from half an inch to an inch and a half in diameter. Adjoining the douche room is a dressing room, with marble tables, &c.; the rising describe (for the cure of piles, &c.) is one of the most couplete contrivances of the kind, being entirely under the control of the patient using the same.

There are unany other appliances, which can be better understood by a personal examination.

price, $2 60 per volume. Orders respectfully solicited.

SEARS PICTORIAL FAMILY PUBLICATIONS are decidedly the best books that agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States. They are valuable for reference, and should be possessed by every family in this great republic. There is not a city or town in these United States, not even those of small importance, but contains many clizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are adapted to the literary wants of the Christian, the patriot, the statesman, and the domestic circle, got up in a superior style of art and workmanship; and are not only such books as will sell, but are such as an agent of good principle will feel free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser sgain after they have been bought.

Our PLAN.—The plan the publisher has so successfully carried out for several years, is the obtaining responsible men as agents, who are well known in their own cruntics, towns, and villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive books among their neighbors and friends. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise will risk little in sending $25 or $50, for which he will receive an assortment as he may direct, at the wholessle cash prices.

Enterprising and active men of respectability and good address, would do well to engage in the sale of the above volumes; and all postmasters, clergymen, book pediars, and newspaper agents, are respectfully requested to act as our agents. A handsome remuneration allowed to all who engage in their sale. For particulars address, post paid,

ENGLISH INSULTS AND IRISH RESENT. MENTS.

We give place to the following communication tion, to avoid the appearance of unfairness in the premises, but with regret that the writer could obtain the assent of his own mind to some of the expressions and intimations it contains. We must here remark, however, firstly, that no candid reader will form a judgment between our correspondent and ourselves, without reading our first editorials in the Telegraph on Friday and Saturday last; and, secondly, that while we cannot denounce Mr. Bulwer, or any other gentleman, for repelling a slander and denouncing a slanderer, we should certainly be no less prompt than our correspondent in resenting a public insult offered to Irishmen and their descendants in this country.

WASHINGTON, May 3, 1851.

To the Editors of the American Telegraph. GENTLEMEN: Your leading editorial of yester day, alluding to the late speech of Mr. Bulwer, contains the following remarkable paragraph:

"Had this distinguished and accomplished gentleman expressed himself in terms of score gentleman expressed himself in terms of scorn and contempt for the author of the late miser-able forgery, we could have approved his senti-ments; but by his revealing his contempt only in words of pleasantry, however scathing their rebuke, he has done much better, and shown himself superior to emotions of anger toward men whom, according to our convictions, no one can defend without disgrace."

It is not my purpose, in addressing you this communication, to vindicate the author of what you are pleased to call a "miserable forgery," because he has a fearless press at his command, and is fully able, if truth be on his side, to de-fend himself. But I desire to notice, very briefly, the sweeping assertions by which not only attempt to justify the insulting lan-guage of the British official, but also to cast unmerited odium upon those who, in the exercise of an unquestionable right, and what they conceived to be an imperative duty, thought proper to give expression to their indignation at the insult maliciously hurled at them as adopted citizens of a country to whose institu tions they are devotedly attached, and which, in times of peril, they have ever shown themselves ready, nay, eager to defend. Now, what was the offensive language used by this "distinguished and accomplished genleman," at the recent St. George's festival? Read it:

"Although it is natural to conjecture, from the semi-barbarous, semi-clad, and Celtic origin some epistles more than once. He was mighty been guilty of the crime of which he boasted-namely, theft-he had in reality been guilty of an offence which more appropriately belongs to a further advanced stage of pantaloons and refinement-[laughter]-1 mean forgery; another example, by the way, of the general maxim, that all savages, whether Celtic or otherwise, when they take to inhabiting cities-even such moral cities as Boston-adopt the vices, without acquiring the virtues or the graces of civilized life.

If this be "revealing his contempt only in words of pleasantry," surely the vocabulary of Billingsgate may hereafter be fitly ranked among the polite literature of the age! Surely, if these be "words of pleasantry," the sting of the viper must be exceedingly pleasant! But, seriously, could more grossly insulting senti-ments have been thrown in the teeth of Irishmen and the sons of Irishmen, than those embodied in the above extract? Is it not a vile calumny, as well as a malicious insult, to say that the Celtic race, "when they take to in-habiting cities—even such moral cities as Boston-adopt the vices without acquiring the virtues or the graces of civilized life?" Is it not a base and infamous insinuation to say that "it is natural to conjecture from the semi-barbarous, semi-clad, and Celtic origin of my Boston friend [and of course all of similar origin,] that he had been guilty of the crime of theft?" And did not the British minister utter both these unwarrantable and execrable sentiments? you these "words of pleasantry?" No, no they smack too strongly of the venom on the tongue from which they fell to be sweetened by such a honeyed term.

But when, in the latter clause of the paragraph quoted from your editorial of yesterday, ou say that this British Ambassador has, in using these "words of pleasantry," "shown simself superior to emotions of anger toward men whom, according to our convictions, no one can defend without disgrace," you venture an assertion which, as you can perceive only pleasantry" in the words of Bulwer, you will permit me very pleasantly to say is unworthy an American editor, and especially one who, like the senior editor of the Telegraph, is a de-scendant of the Celtic race, as his name im-Who are the men whom "no one can defend without disgrace?" To be sure, the language of the editor of the Telegraph is ambiguous; but the inference is, that they are, according to his "convictions," the Boston editor and those who were associated with him in the recent struggles for liberty in Ireland. Is it true, then, that no one can defend them without disgrace? Is it true that O'Brien, and Meagher, and Doheny, (the latter of whom was a prominent actor in the late indignation meetts, cannot be defended? Who ever questioned their virtue, their courage, their patriotism, save some minion of British power, or some un-Americanized American fit to be such? But it will be time enough to defend them when their characters are assailed. Of Mr. Doheny, how-eyer, who prepared the memorial which was presented at the indignation meeting, I will say, from my acquaintance with him, that I believe a purer patriot, a truer republican, a more perfect gentleman, never crossed the Atlantic. And I will say, further, that he is not the man to assume any position thoughtlessly or rushly; nor is he the man to back out from any stand he does take. He has now taken a stand in vindication of the honor of his countrymen and their descendants in America, as he once did valiantly for the achievement of the liberties of his native land; and I sincerely hope that the memorial which he penned may receive the signature of every Irishman and the son of every Irishman in the city of New York, and that British insolence may be made to feel that, although omnipotent in Ireland, it is powerless in America

Respectfully,

For the American Telegraph. PULPIT ELOQUENCE Of the late Rev. John M. Duncan, D. D., of Bal-timore, from a sketch in the discourse of Rev. John C. Smith, delivered in this city on Sabbath morning, May 4th, 1851. At this point my heart prompts me to notice an event that occurred in the past week. Death came on Wednesday, and dissolved the relations to this life of the Rev. John M. Duncan, D. D., to this life of the Rev. John M. Duncan, D. D., of Baltimore. In introducing this name, I can best set forth the man in the language of the text: "An eloquent man and mighty in the Scriptures." I may speak of him, for he was the pastor of my mother and family; and, emphatically, my pastor. To him, in the days of my boyhood, I resited the Shorter Catechism and Bible Lessons; under him I united with the Church of God, and afterwards taught in and superintended the Sabbath School connected with the church. I was his student in almost the whole of my theological course—indeed the whole, except a few months in Princeton seminary. I remained a member of that church seminary. I remained a member of that church until I was licensed to preach the gospel. I speak what I know, when I say he was "An eloquent man and mighty in the Scriptures.'

To a commanding person were added all those rare qualities which make a pulpit orator, in the highest and best sense. A voice of peculiar softness combined with great fulness, and its every tone was music. When he spoke there was the deep pathos that moved and melted to was the deep pathos that moved and melted to tears the very large congregation that always assembled and hung upon his lips. I have never known any man who possessed and pre-served through a long ministry such power as he. The last service he rendered (at which I was present) was over the remains of my sister. some three years ago. It consisted simply of a prayer at the house, over the coffin, and another at the graye, in Greenmount Cemetery. But such praying—it seemed as if the very heavens were opened around me, and I had been caught up and permitted to hear unutterable things. In the brief space of five or ten minutes he said everything: he prayed for every interest, and touched upon associations past and present. We had the retrospect and prespect set vividly before us, in words of living light, and every spirit seemed to be in communion with God and the spirits of those whom we had loved in life, and hear him and live over again the influence of that solemn and deeply affecting scene. With such a man the power was not in the voice, nor in the grace and majesty of his delivery alone, but in the exhibition of truth in scripture array and combination. The morning of every Sabbath in all his ministry was devoted to expository discourses on the word of God, in a regular series of lectures on one of largely used. An Ohio paper says there is the gospels as written by an Evangelist, or an enough of this valuable timber split into fonce epistle by one of the Apostles. In this way he rails every year in Ohio to build the national went through the New Testament, and over marine of the Union

I always heard him preach—for my princi-ples never allowed me to leave the church when service was rendered there—and am pre-would frequently set him on a table, and pro-I always heard him preach-for my princiwhen service was rendered there—and am prepared to say that I have never seen or heard mise him a cherry if he would make a speech (take him all in all) his superior; at this moment I cannot remember his equal. There ted exertion, so that before he was ten years was such thought, so clothed, so uttered, so old he could address company with some degree anointed, that all present heard, and but few of eloquence. As he grew up, his father made without emotion. He had a sympathy in all him repeat every Sunday, as well as he could, that he did and said which reached every heart the sermon which had been preached, by which and moistened many an eye.

The memory of such a pastor is blessed, and will be cherisbed by all who knew him in life and enjoyed his ministrations. He deserved well of his people, and affectionate and faithful were they to him to the end. When stricken down by disease they gathered around him in sympathy; and when at length his shattered health compelled him to resign his charge, they settled a most liberal annuity upon him.

By his departure they are involved in the deepest gloom; a cloud now bangs over them, but I cannot but hope that the bow of the covenant is seen spanning the darkness. "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof.' AMERICANS ARRIVED IN LONDON. -The Liverpool Times, in announcing the arrival of the American mail steamer Pacific at that port,

from New York, says:

Among her passengers are the Hon. C. B. It is placed upon the Haddock, (nephew of Daniel Webster,) U. S. and is covered by charge d'affaires to Portugal; C. S. Goodrich, a cook's galley. ("Peter Parley,") U. S. Consul at Paris; A. S. Willingham, editor of the Charleston (S. C.) Courier, on a tour; Col. J. S. Du Solle, for many years, and at present, connected with the Philadelphia and New York press; John S. Cunningham, (of the Virginia press,) Commissioner from the State of Virginia to the World's Fair, and also bearer of despatches to the U.S. Legation at London; Rev. Mr. Choules, bearer of despatches to Paris; Rev. A. C. Cox; B. F. Palmer, inventor of the celebrated artificial leg. a model of which will be at the great exposition; Jules Hauel, the famous perfumeur at Philadelphia, who has made a quarter of a million of dollars in the last ten years by supplying the toilette of the Americans; Hon G. W member of Congress from California, and Gen. Walbridge, of New York, who have with them about £5,000 worth of magnificent specimens of the auriferous quartz of El Dorado, such as have never been seen in Europe. These bright and glittering witnesses of the inexhaustible gold and silver deposites of California will doubt-less attract universal attention, and excite intense enthusiasm in the Old World. Mr. Wright was among the first explorers of the gold regions, and both gentlemen are at present the most extensive owners and workers of California gold mines by machinery.

TRAVELING TO CALIFORNIA-WOMEN AND PAK-TALCONS .- A lady correspondent of the Lowell (Mass.) Courier, writing from St. Louis, shows how some of the fair sex have adopted the pantaloons: "On our way here I was in company with

"On our way here I was in company with four young ladies, who were bound to California, under the protection of their father and brother; and as they were all four dressed in male attire. I have thought some account of them would be interesting to you. They were from Philadelphia, and highly respectable—their father, Mr. Springer, having been an eminent merchant there, who met with reverses in business. I first met this family at Louisville, on board the steamer on which I embarked for St. Louis, and continued with them to this cive Louis, and continued with them to this city. They intended going over the plains, from In-dependence, in wagons, and will have a long and tedious journey to perform. They were in fine spirits, however, seeming to look upon their journey as a pleasant excursion. Their conduct on the boat was perfectly lady-like; indeed, every one was pleased with them. They have a supply of coarse male apparel for the plains, but their suits worn on the boat were fashionable and fine—dress black coats, black pants, buff vests, and hats of glossy black. The buttons of their vests were plain, flat-surfaced and very rich. Their coats and pants were all modish, and fit to a nicety. Their hair was cut short, and their whole appearance was genteel. They stated to me that they felt perfectly at ease in their new garments, and preferred them to gowns. I asked them whether they proposed traveling on the plains in their fine cloth suits. They apswered in the negative, observing that they had a supply of rough clothes for the journey, but that while they were yet in civilized regions, they intended to dress like gentlemen.

"Now, I can say with perfect truth, that no harm or ill-nature resulted from the course pursued by the Miss Springers. Every pas-senger spoke well of them, and the lady passengers, with only one exception, acknowledged that they no longer saw any thing wrong in females dressing in male attire. I began to think, therefore, that Miss Webber may come to our country safely, and not be considered an eccentric. At all events, I have written to her to that effect, and volunteered to her a cordial reception. But I must caution you not to keep your eyes too intently upon her person, or you will be sure to fall in love with her. She is the beau ideal of a handsome gentleman, and I could never desire to see her in female dress The eldest of the Miss Springers is very intelligent and well educated. She says the day will yet come when all women will wear the male attire. I have a strong notion of getting a handsome suit for myself, to be worn occasionally in selected company. I do not fancy black clothes, and therefore must adopt Miss Webber's evening suit I suppose—the blue dress coat, buff vest, and drab pants.

THE USE OF WHARVES .- The Secretary of State of New York, to whom was lately referred the question whether a person owning a wharf in the city of New York, Brooklyn, or States Island, can lease such preperty so as to exclude the use of it by any other person than the les-see, has decided that wherees are grants to promote the commerce of the State, and that all persons have a right to use them in common, by paying the regular wharfage.

SHIP TIMBER .- Some of the New York shipbuilders say that black walnut is a better timber for ship-building than live oak, and that its high price is the only reason why it is not his habit of attention grew powerful.

ARRIVED .- The schooner Hartford, Captain Teague, from Wilmington, N. C., arrived at Wilmington, Delaware, on Sunday night, a th 0,000 feet of hard-pine floor boar is, to Joshua Summons and 200 barrels of rosin to Chur's ing Wilmington every vessel is searched and smoked, in pursuance of a law, for which the captain has to pay three dollars. This precaution is taken to prevent slaves being carried off in vessels trading to that port. The law is're garded by captains and pilots as unjust and oppressive, yet they have no choice but to submit to it. - Wilmington Rep.

WORKING SAILS BY A STEAM-ENGINE .- A ship called the Medora is about to sail from Glas gow, Scotland, for San Francisco, which has on oard a small steam-engine, intended to weigh the anchor, pump ship, hoist the topsuils, and do any other hard hauling that may be required, in addition to hoisting out and in cargo. It is placed upon deck, near the fore batchway, and is covered by an erection about as large as

The editor of the Alabama Arous thus makes light of his troubles: "We see the sheriff has advertised the Argus office for sale, during our absence. We hope the bidders will have a merry time of it. If the sheriff can sell it, he will do more than we ever could. Like a damp percussion cap, we think it will fail to go off

A French work, recently published, contains an interesting account of the rage for gaming at the court of Louis XIV. Madame de Montespan was in the habit of losing seventy or eighty thousand dollars. She once bet two hundred thousand dollars upon three cards and won. On one Christmas eve she lost about six hundred thousand dollars. A courtier named Dargeau had such knowledge of algebra, that be calculated the chances during the shuffling of the cards, and often won enormous sums

IMPORTANT ENTERPRISE .- A company of enterprising gentlemen from Cincinnati, including Messrs. Rogers and Sherlock of that city, who are well known to many of our citizens, have succeeded in perfecting a purchase of a loca-tion below the town of Portland, on the Kentucky side, consisting of one hundred and eighty acres of land, for the purpose of constructing a dry dock, in connexion with an extensive boat
